Erika Birg is a partner at Nelson Mullins who focuses her practice on commercial litigation, alternative dispute resolution, business torts, contract disputes, trade secrets, computer fraud and non-compete matters.

Problem

As the litigator for a very document intensive case crossing state lines, Ms. Birg was faced with an all too common logistical nightmare. One of her deposition witnesses was in a neighboring state, and the subject matter included thousands of pages of exhibits. Specifically, her deposition had:

- ▶ 237 exhibits (5,585 pages)
- ▶ 50,265 total printed pages
- ▶ Documents that would fill about 14 Bankers Boxes and weigh about 448 lbs to be shipped, adding risk that the deposition could be delayed by a third party shipping service or that documents might be lost en route
- ▶ A client in a third state who wanted to follow along in the deposition remotely

Solution

With these logistical issues in mind, Ms. Birg realized the potential increased efficiency that AgileLaw could bring to this deposition:

- ▶ Exhibits could be uploaded digitally without the need to bring paper copies
- ▶ Exhibits could be organized quickly using the software's simple "drag and drop" feature
- ▶ Traveling to the deposition would be easier, and would only require Ms. Birg and her staff to carry their laptops and tablets
- ▶ Remote participants would be able to log in and review the exhibits that were revealed to the witness

Results

In a single deposition, Nelson Mullins was able to save their client $1,616 by using AgileLaw.

Plus...

- ▶ Preparation time was reduced
- ▶ Client was able to join remotely
- ▶ Traveling was easier and less stressful

“Despite using this new technology for the first time, the deposition was much smoother with AgileLaw than it would have been using paper exhibits.”
